

Day 24: Projects II

Raymond Yee

April 18, 2013 (<http://bit.ly/wwod1324>)

Announcements

- ▶ dp.la has launched. dp.la hackathon on Friday afternoon 2-6pm in 202 South Hall, led by Dave Lester and me:
- ▶ I've graded HW Day 21 and accepting late submissions/resubmissions.
- ▶ Eric Kansa will be speaking to us next Thursday, April 25 about opencontext.org.
- ▶ Next week on Tuesday, a series of events at D-Lab.

For an easy way to post notebooks: use gists.

I like Carl's use of `gist.github.com` to host IPython notebooks – they are lightweight, easy to set up, and actually full git repos too. If you do use gists, continue to upload revisions of your notebook to the same gist. (e.g., `https://gist.github.com/carlshan/5410596/revisions`)

Come to Class

I expect everyone to come to class for the remainder of the semester because getting a chance to talk even briefly is really valuable for getting projects moving along. If you are absent, send me a note with an explanation why.

Homework

Due Tuesday April 23, 2013, noon PDT:

- ▶ update the Google docs for our projects with the current status of your projects, with answers to the questions:

- 1) What are you currently working on?
- 2) What are you planning to get done this week?
- 3) What are problems you need help with to take next steps on your project?

- ▶ Update of your IPython notebook
- ▶ Break down who is working on what and what you plan to get done until the next class. I want an email from each of you individually on what you are doing.